ENGLISH WOMAN MOTORIST NABS GERMAN AVIATOR

LONDON, August 7—A woman motorist in the Bristol area of England today was credited with having captured a German aviator who parachuted to earth after his bombing plane had been hit by British anti-aircraft fire.

The aviator offered no resistance when sighted by the English woman on the roadside, but surrendered willingly. He told his feminine captor that he had been shot down eleven days previously and had since been roaming around the countryside trying to avoid capture.

Hunger apparently prompted him to surrender to the first passer-by on the roadside.

ITALIAN FORCES OPEN OFFENSIVE IN AFRICAN AREA

London Says "First Phase" Ends With British "Dominating"

PLANES RAID HOLY LAND

Haifa Oil Tanks, Refineries Hit, Rome Reports; German Action Minor

By International News Service
With the "Battle of Africa" overshadowing the anticipated German invasion attempt on England, Italy and Germany today claimed wide-spread successes for their airmen who dropped cargo on cargo of bombs on British positions in Africa, the Holy Land and areas of the British Isles.

Further word was awaited to clarify the results of the British-Italian engagements already fought in British Somaliland and on the Libyan-Egyptian desert frontier.

But the Italian high command said Italian planes bombed Haifa, in the Holy Land, setting oil tanks afire and destroying an oil refinery. The British North African encampments south of Soudan and the Alexandria-Mersa Matruh railroad were also bombed, it was claimed.

Official announcement was made that Italian columns have crossed the border into British Somaliland, and that British positions in East Africa were attacked in bombing raids, and one plane brought down.

Germany announced aerial attacks on British airbases at Tynesmouth and St. Athan, the Vickers-Armstrong aircraft works at Chester and armament plants at Swansea, Wales. In addition, the sinking of 30,000 tons of British shipping by a lone German warship was claimed.

Only minor German air raids occurred during the night. Bombs fell on open countryside in two Scottish regions, it was stated, and leaflets and a few bombs fell on the Bristol Channel area, causing only "negligible" damage.

800 FLEE HOMES AS STORM HITS GULF DISTRICTS

NEW ORLEANS, August 7—An estimated 800 persons were left homeless today along the Louisiana gulf coast, buffeted for two days by a gale which at times neared hurricane proportions.

As storm warnings remained aloft from Bay St. Louis, Miss., to Velasco, Texas, the coastguard reported it had removed "at least 450 persons" to safety in the storm area. Hundreds of others were aided by state and local authorities.

CHILD BEING PUNISHED FINDS HIDDEN TREASURE

BINGHAM, Me., August 7—Charley Harlow is a bright, healthy lad with a bent for mischief that is normal in one of his years. Charley is six.

Today, for some reason best known to himself and his parents, Charley was told to go into the woodshed to stay there until he decided to be good.

The minutes passed slowly in the wood shed. Charley went exploring. In one corner of the shed was a pile of debris. Charley kicked it over.

That kick unearthed a dusty, rusty glass jar. In the jar was $525 in cash. Also in the jar were valuable jewelry and documents showing the jar was the property of a previous tenant. The latter said he believed the treasure was hidden by his late wife.

And now to the problem. How to reward a little boy who brings profit out of punishment.

Charley's parents are trying to figure out the answer.

VATICAN FLAYS PERSONS WHO SPREAD PROPAGANDA

VATICAN CITY, August 7—A bitter denunciation of propagandists who inflame public feelings for their own ends was voiced by Pope Pius today in a speech to newlyweds at the Vatican.

Without referring to any specific offenders, the pontiff attacked "anonymous" maniacs in certain sections of the press whose pens, dipped in gall and mud, spread lies, calumnies, discord and hatred in an effort to destroy brotherly relations.

HALF INCH RAIN HALTS DROUGHT

Farm Observers Say Corn And Pastures Aided By Tuesday's Downpour

More than one-half inch of rain late Tuesday afternoon and evening ended a drought which was burning Pickaway County pastures and corn fields. The .53 inches which fell Tuesday was the first registered by Miss Abbe Mills Clarke, local weather observer, since July 25, when .35 inches of rain fell.

County Agent F. K. Blair said that the rain would prove beneficial to tassel corn and pastures. The sweet corn crop, however, has already been damaged considerably by the dry weather.

In southern portions of the state, rainstorms Tuesday were reported to have done considerable damage. A high wind and an .81 inch rainfall in Portsmouth, damaged roads, uprooted trees, and disrupted telephone communications, officials said. Crops were also reported to have been damaged by wind and rain.

The rain Tuesday pulled Circleville temperatures from 90 to 61 degrees. Fair weather prevailed Wednesday, although weather experts predicted more showers for Thursday.

COL. BEIGHTLER TAKES COMMAND OF GUARD UNITS

COLUMBUS, August 7—Col. Robert S. Beightler, state highway director, today was promoted to Brigadier General of the U. S. National Guard to succeed Frank D. Henderson, Ohio Penitentiary warden who resigned.

As brigadier general, Beightler will command the 74th infantry brigade, comprised of the 166th regiment of central Ohio and the 147th regiment of southern Ohio.

Col. W. S. Bird, of Columbus, was promoted to chief of staff of the 37th division to succeed Beightler.

"To succeed General Henderson," said Beightler, "will be a most difficult task. I served under him in my early military days and I recognize in him one of the finest military brains Ohio has ever produced. His loss will be felt keenly by the Ohio National Guard."

Adjutant General Gilson D. Light, in whose office the promotion was announced, was not present because of a cold.

Another promotion announced was that of Major Donald E. Spray, of Columbus, to lieutenant colonel in the quartermaster corps.

POWDER BLAST FATAL TO TRIO NEAR LEBANON

No Suspicion Of Sabotage Voiced After Tragedy On Little Miami

ALL VICTIMS MARRIED

Iron Roller Hurlled Over River; Timber Goes High Into Air

LEBANON, August 7—A terrific explosion of mysterious origin killed three workmen and demolished a small building today at the King Powder Company plant at King's Mills, 10 miles southeast of Lebanon.

Robert A. King, Jr., a company official, said there was no suspicion of sabotage although the firm, at other plants, has government orders.

Charles Resibois, 25; William Reed, 39, and Herbert Combs, 55, the only workers on duty in the building where the explosion occurred at 7:20 a. m., were killed. All were married.

King declined to speculate on the cause of the blast, asserting he had no theory as to its origin. The powder plant, one of the largest in the United States, is situated on the Little Miami River near the village of King's Mills.

Windows Shattered

Hundreds of windows in the village and in the plant of the Peters Cartridge Company, across the river, were shattered. The powder press building, about 20 feet square, where blasting powder was pressed into cakes, was blown to bits.

"It sounded like a clap of thunder," said W. Cline, King's Mills storekeeper, describing the explosion.

A 1,000-pound iron roller was blown 200 feet across the river, and pieces of timber were hurled a thousand feet into the air.

Bodies of the three victims were found 50 feet from the site of the demolished building, the clothing burned off.

The King Powder Company employs about 100 men at its King's Mills plant, but none except the three men killed was injured. It was the first serious explosion there.

War Department Report On Munitions Site May Be Heard In Few Days

WASHINGTON, August 7—Rep. H. K. Claypool (D), of Ohio, said today that he hoped for a favorable report "in a few days" from the War Department on his request that a munitions plant be located in the Whisler-Kingston district near Circleville.

"I explained the advantages of the site and they said they were very much interested and would let me know soon," Claypool declared.

Claypool said he understood the plant and equipment would occupy eight or ten acres and employ 4,000 men. The proposed Ohio site, he said, has three trunk line railroads within ten miles of each other.

ISLE'S DEFENSES READY FOR ANY GERMAN ACTION

LONDON, August 7—Great Britain has reorganized her defenses to repel an attempted German invasion at every point, First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander told a national defense luncheon today.

"British defense plans," he said, "provide a counter for each and every possible method of attack."

"Over the whole field, preparations to defeat an invasion have been revolutionized during the last six weeks."

"I am in no way pessimistic. We are watching and beating the enemy's effort to blockade us. We are watching and waiting for whatever course the enemy chooses to adopt."

"We have looked very carefully to our moat and our ramparts in the knowledge that hard knocks, stern trials and grievous tribulations lie ahead."

COLUMBUS, August 7—Dr. R. H. Markwith, health director, today expressed "deep concern" over sharp increases in infantile paralysis cases in the state during the first seven months of the year.

Fearing that an epidemic may be in the offing, Dr. Markwith urged immediate reporting of cases so that research may be made to prevent further spread of the disease.

The health director stated that nine cases have been reported in Portsmouth in the last ten days. Forty-nine cases have been reported since the first of the year as compared with twenty-one for the same period in 1939, Markwith revealed.

Wheeler Denies Filibuster Plan, Says Battle Will Continue Two Weeks

WASHINGTON, August 7—The administration's program for military conscription was defended as necessary to preserve the "cherished heritages" of the nation, and assailed as a "Hitlerized method" in formal majority and minority reports on the legislation made public today.

The reports—representing opposing views in the senate military affairs committee—were placed before the senate as administration leaders hoped to postpone a sensational battle over conscription and pass less controversial companion legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to mobilize the national guard.

Proceeding under debate limitation, the senate today hoped to postpone a spectacular battle over military conscription program and pass its less controversial companion measure—legislation authorizing the President to mobilize the National Guard for one year's training.

Senate administration leaders, already behind schedule on the two vital sections of the defense program, clapped a debate restriction on their colleagues in an effort to approve the guard mobilization by nightfall.

They predicted passage of the guard bill in several hours if they can separate it from the issue of compulsory military training in peacetime. But there was little indication that the senate will confine itself to the business at hand as it threatened to again "get out of control" over the conscription issue.

There were intimations, too, of more bitter clashes between opponents and proponents of conscription that postponed a final vote on the guard mobilization bill yesterday and resulted in the most rough-and-tumble debate in the senate in years.

Sen. Holt Assailed

Sen. Holt (D) W. Va., opposing conscription, promised to amplify his reply to charges by Sen. Minton (D) Ind. that he is a member of a "slacker family" and unpatriotic by opposing the legislation.

The debate limitation restricts each senator's speech to 30 minutes on the bill and 30 minutes on each amendment.

"I think it is high time that we settle down and get to work on this legislation," said Majority Leader Barkley.

He plans to call up the conscription bill if the guard mobilization measure passes today. It calls for the registration of all men between 21 and 31, and makes them liable to a year's military training. The War Department estimated that only half of the 12,000,000 men in this age bracket will be qualified for service.

ISLE'S DEFENSES CUDAHY ANGRERS READY FOR ANY BRITISH; PAPERS GERMAN ACTION HIT STATEMENTS

LONDON, August 7—The wrath of Britain's press fell today about the ears of John Cudahy, United States ambassador to Belgium, who yesterday warned that Belgium faces famine unless she is able to import wheat after October 1.

Severe comment offered by Cudahy at a press conference aroused the ire of British newspapers, among them his statement that the Germans in Belgium showed great restraint and that German troops there "behaved better than American soldiers would have done under similar circumstances."

Under the ironical headline, "Strange Statements by U. S. Envoy," the London News Chronicle said in an editorial:

"It is generally felt, on grounds of good taste alone, that this is hardly the time for a foreign diplomat, ostensibly on a private visit in England, to praise openly the German conduct of their invasion of an innocent neutral and by implication make it appear that Britain is responsible for famine in Belgium."

"Who does Cudahy think invaded Belgium—Great Britain?" The London Daily Mirror said: "The people of Britain will attach little importance to this astonishing statement."

And the London Daily Express trumpeted: "The best answer to Cudahy's story is to tell the world how Hitler hopes to starve our women and children."

F. D. R., WALLACE TO TALK ABOUT CAMPAIGN PLANS

HYDE PARK, N. Y., August 7—President Roosevelt and his running mate, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, will confer here tomorrow over their plans for the 1940 campaign.

Temporary executive offices made the bare announcement that Wallace would arrive at Hyde Park. The seclusion of the President's family estate will afford the two men an excellent opportunity to map out their respective movements between now and election day.

CORN ACREAGE LOW, BUT YIELD MOVES HIGHER

1940 Crop Estimated At Two And Half Billion Bushels In Nation

SPRING PIGS FEWER

Price Outlook Uncertain; Sudden End Of War Would Be Vital

COLUMBUS, August 7 — Corn acreage for the United States, at the last report, was 12.8 percent below the average for the last 10 years, but the last estimates on probable production placed the 1940 crop at 2,515,098,000 bushels, which is 5 percent above the average production for the last 10 years.

Yields per acre this year are estimated at 28 bushels, as compared with a 23-bushel average yield for the last 10 years. Ohio prospects on July 1 were for a crop of 132,000,000 bushels which would have been 39,000,000 bushels less than was produced in 1939. However, unfavorable weather conditions in parts of the state since July 1 may have reduced the crop below the estimate.

The estimated United States crop on July 1 plus the carryover of old corn will provide a total of nearly four billion bushels. A factor which may affect the 1940 corn market is the decided decrease in the number of spring pigs produced and also the expected decrease in fall pigs.

The spring pig crop was 8 percent smaller than in 1939 and the number of sows to farrow in the fall is expected to be 12 percent less than for the fall of 1939. The total pig crop for the year will be about 10 percent below that for last year.

Rural economists at Ohio State University say there never before was a time when the price outlook for farm products was so uncertain. Sudden ending of the European war is almost certain to depress prices for both industrial and farm products, and victory for the dictator countries would almost certainly adversely affect export of both types of goods.

Ohio farmers will be in a better position than those in many other sections to take advantage of any improvement in farm prices due to better conditions in domestic industry. Ohio farm goods are produced near industrial centers and can be placed immediately on markets where an improved demand materializes.

GRAIN LOANS FOR 1940 AVAILABLE TO FARMERS

Emergency grain loans for 1940 are now available to farmers in Pickaway County, and applications for these loans are now being received at County Agent's Office Circleville, Ohio by Clarence Fealty, field supervisor of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration.

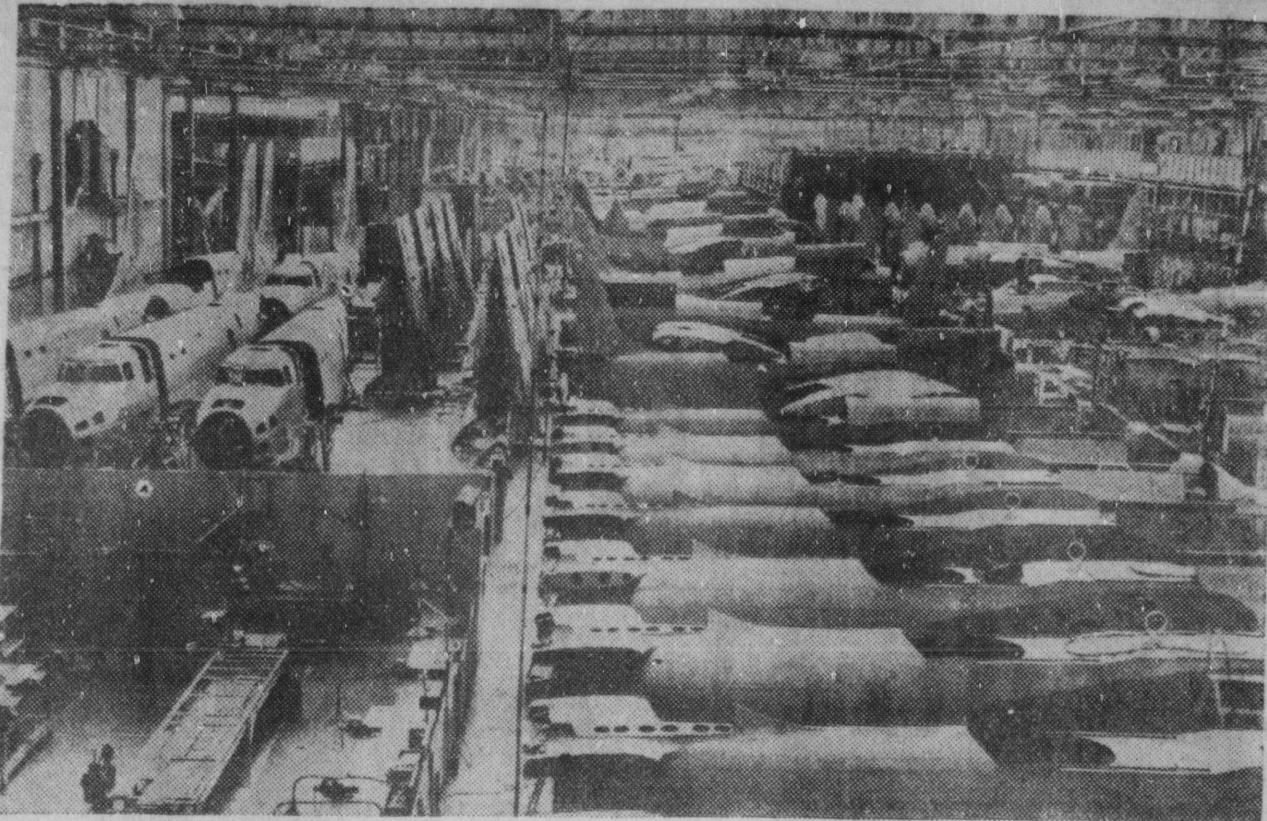

These loans will be made, as in the past, only to farmers whose cash requirements are small and who cannot obtain a loan from any other source, including production credit associations, banks, or other private concerns or individuals.

As in former years, the money Nurse Mae M. Groome made 100 loaned will be limited to the application of 1940 winter grain crops and in no instance may exceed $400,000.

Borrowers who obtain loans for the production of cash crops are required to give as security a first lien on the crop financed.

Horrible thought: maybe the heat wave that began in July will last as long as the cold wave that began last January.

Wheat Growers Should Seek Insurance Early

COLUMBUS, August 7 — Ohio wheat growers desiring to insure their 1941 wheat crop against all hazards can apply for all-risk crop insurance policies up to August 31, according to Elmer F. Kruse, state AAA chairman.

Applications for policies in all Ohio wheat growing counties should be made to the county AAA committee. Each county has its own premium rate determined by the history of wheat production in that county. Upon payment of the premium for the insurance the seeded acreage is insured to produce either 50 or 75 percent of an average crop. The grower can elect to buy either class of coverage.

LIMA FIRM GETS ORDER TO BUILD 20 LOCOMOTIVES

LIMA, O., August 7 — Several hundred men are expected to be called back to work at the Lima Locomotive Works, company officials said today in announcing the receipt from the Southern Pacific Railroad of an order for 20 huge oil-burning passenger locomotives.

Total cost of the locomotives is approximated at $3,500,000. Although slightly larger than engines of the same type delivered to the railroad last year, each is listed as weighing 365,000 pounds, and having a capacity of 6,000 gallons of oil and 23,500 gallons of water.

At present, the locomotive works is building four engines for the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad and 15 for the New York Central.

MORE MOTORBOATS

BOSTON — Songwriters have extolled both the open road and the bounding main, but crowded highways — especially weekends — are turning many pleasure seekers to the seas. Massachusetts reported a total registration of 10,648 motorboats compared to 10,024 a year ago, a jump of more than 600.

F. D. R. TO TOUR EASTERN BASES

Non-Political Visits Into Vital Regions Expected; Home Guard Favored

HYDE PARK, N. Y., August 7

President Roosevelt today laid increasingly heavy emphasis on plans for total defense of the United States as he organized a tour of New England naval bases and simultaneously announced a "home defense guard" program involving voluntary enlistment by World War veterans.

Persistent reports were afloat around the Hyde Park estate that Mr. Roosevelt intended to leave late this week for a fast swing along the coastline of the New England states, inspecting such major naval stations as the Boston navy yard and the New London, Conn., submarine base.

The President told reporters he would not be able to announce his itinerary until the last minute. Instead, the chief executive talked freely about War Department plans to form members of such veterans' organizations as the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars into a nucleus for a home guard.

The idea back of this move is to have a set-up in every state that would be able to take the place of the National Guard, if and when the guardsmen are called into federal service for an extended training period. The President and Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York discussed the home defense problem at a Monday night dinner conference. Mr. Roosevelt made it clear that the Washington administration wanted a home guard established in each of the 48 states—particularly in the larger cities and towns.

Tours Not Political

As was the case in 1936 when he made mid-summer "drought area" and "flood control" inspection trips, White House aides insisted that the 1940 defense tours would be strictly non-political.

It was obvious, however, that even though he refrained from speech-making the President was certain to draw large crowds wherever he goes to look into the progress of his preparedness campaign. The first trip around the Norfolk, Va., area at the mouth of Chesapeake Bay brought typical campaign crowds out on the streets and roads over a 75-mile route.

If, as forecast, Mr. Roosevelt visits New England bases before his return to Washington he will be roughly retracing his triumphant 1936 campaign tour. Four years ago the President made a

Wheat Growers Should Seek Insurance Early

COLUMBUS, August 7 — Ohio wheat growers desiring to insure their 1941 wheat crop against all hazards can apply for all-risk crop insurance policies up to August 31, according to Elmer F. Kruse, state AAA chairman.

Applications for policies in all Ohio wheat growing counties should be made to the county AAA committee. Each county has its own premium rate determined by the history of wheat production in that county. Upon payment of the premium for the insurance the seeded acreage is insured to produce either 50 or 75 percent of an average crop. The grower can elect to buy either class of coverage.

Although 95 percent of the all-risk insurance written in Ohio in 1940 was paid for through advances earned or to be earned under the agricultural conservation program, growers may pay premiums with wheat, in the form of warehouse receipts, or with cash. If cash is paid, the insurance division purchases wheat to be used in paying losses.

The importance of wheat insurance in Ohio is proved by records on policies covering the 1939 and the 1940 crops. For 1939, 1,882 claims were paid out of a total of 10,269 Ohio policies. This year, there will be approximately 8,000 claims for losses of about $400,000 out of the total of 29,059 policies.

Mr. Kruse emphasizes the fact that applications for the insurance must be made before August 31. This is almost four weeks earlier than applications had to be filed in 1939. State officers of the AAA expect the number of crop insurance policies written in the state this year will show a considerable increase over the 1939 figures.

CAPITAL TENSE IN DEBATE OVER U. S. SECURITY

World War Days Recalled
As Rival Forces Use
Different Methods

BITTER CHARGES HEARD

Question Of Safety Vital;
Two Camps Form With
Views Varied

WASHINGTON, August 7—A tenseness, unequalled since World War days, is rapidly taking Washington by the throat.

The excessive bitterness which has marked congressional debate during the last few days is generally regarded in Washington as a fairly accurate mirror of the feeling which has permeated the capital since the fall of France.

Charges of "slacker," "Fifth Columnist," "Nazi agent," "British agent," "war monger" and similar accusations which have punctuated the debate of the lawmakers are viewed as actually the outward manifestation of two bitterly opposed camps:

1. Those who are sincerely convinced that a movement is under way to throw the United States into the war within the next few months; and;

2. Those who appear to be convinced that if Great Britain suffers the same fate as France, Germany may invade the Western Hemisphere almost immediately.

In the first group the most active leaders have been Col. Charles
A. Lindbergh, former Secretary of War Woodring, Senators Wheeler (D) Mont, Hiram Johnson (R)
Calif., Bennett Clark (D) Mo.,
Holt (D) W. Va., and John L.
Lewis, of the CIO.

In the second group, the most active have been Gen. John J.
Pershing, Secretary of War Stimson; Chairman Sheppard, of the senate military affairs committee, Chairman Key Pittman, of the senate foreign relations committee, and Senators Pepper (D) Fla., Lee
(D) Okla., and Minton (D) Ind.

Charges Healed
The bitterness reached its peak in the senate during the last 48 hours when Pepper accused Lindbergh of being "the chief of the fifth column in this country," while Minton was charging Holt with coming from a family of world war
"slackers."

Replies made to these and similar attacks that have occurred in the last two months uniformly have included charges of fealty to Britain, "inciting war hysteria," and a desire to lead the United States into war.

Actually, the opposing forces claim objectives far different from those attributed to them by each other. The Lindbergh - Wheeler-Woodring followers state that there is only a movement to keep the United States out of war. The Pershing-Stimson - Pittman group contends its only aim is to make certain this country is adequately prepared to defend itself against possible invasion.

But out of it all, the wedge between them is being driven deeper and deeper, and the gall and wormwood is being spilt with more and more bitterness daily. Procedure, particularly in the senate, has gotten out of hand on an increasing number of occasions, while differences aired in public are being carried into the privacy of the cloakrooms on a personal basis.

Contemporary historians, meanwhile, furrow their brows and recall that only a scant 24 years ago, the nation's history was being written in a vitriol that was strikingly parallel.

CONVICT, 23, DROWNS IN SCIOTO; BODY RECOVERED

CHILLICOTHE, August 7—Ben Turner, 23, an inmate of the Federal Industrial Reformatory, drowned in the Scioto River Tuesday. Searchers from the office of Sheriff Joseph Vincent recovered
the body late Tuesday afternoon.
They said Turner and another inmate of the institution had been burning trash along the river when they decided to take a swim. Turner sank while the rest of the work crew watched from the bank,
unable to assist him.

He was convicted in Florida courts of charges of forgery, and was sentenced to the reformatory
April 6, 1939.

With the chigger season at hand,
Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health

CHIGGER MITES

Chiggers are larval forms of various species of mites belong-commonly known as harvest mites.

Many different species of chiggers are known to attack vertebrate hosts, but only two chigger mites attacking man have been recog-

the common North American chigis oval, right red, and, as in the first or larval stage of all mites, possesses only 3 pairs of legs. In the unfed condition it is scarcely visible to the naked eye. The legs and surface of the body are covered by numerous feathered hairs.

The adult lays eggs in the ground and the chiggers hatch in the spring soon after warm weather begins.

Chiggers have a widespread distribution in the United States.
They have been found in low lands and well up in the mountains where-ever there is rough growth of weeds and shrubbery. In the southern United States they may begin to cause annoyance early in May, while in the northern part of their range they seldom appear before the middle of June.

The North American chigger is not only a pest of man but it has been reported as attacking a wide range of vertebrates, including domestic animals, small mammals, birds and reptiles. It is an important pest of poultry, frequently causing the death of young chickens.

Method Of Attack

Chiggers attach themselves to the surface of the skin by means of their mouthparts and feed much as do ticks. They apparently feed themselves upon epidermal tissue liquefied by a secretion which they themselves inject into the skin. When they become fully engorged they drop off. The localization of chigger attachment, is determined by two factors, the tightness of the clothing at certain parts of the body and the thickness of the skin. Experiments have shown that chiggers attack by preference where the skin is very thin and the flesh wrinkled or tender. Although it is widely believed that chiggers burrow into the skin and embed their entire body, this method of attack must be extremely uncommon; they would be unable to accomplish such an invasion except in instances where a large enough opening in the skin was already present.

An intense itching, apparently due to the liquefying secretion injected by the chigger, develops within the first 24 hours after ex-posure, and this is followed by a breaking out of wheals or papules surrounded by an inflamed area.

The papules may be surmounted
by a pinhead-sized vesicle containing clear fluid. The itching generally reaches its maximum on the second or third day, then gradually subsides, though it may persist intermittently for several weeks. Scratching may be followed by secondary infection. If the lesions are numerous, fever, headache, and temporary nervous upset may result, and the intense pruritus may lead to loss of sleep and digestive disturbances. In this country chiggers are not known to transmit any disease, but in the Orient an allied species has been shown to be the carrier of Japanese river fever.

Treatment and Prevention

If it is known that there has been exposure to chiggers the skin should be examined, preferably with a hand lens, for the active larvae. However, they are so minute and they move so rapidly over the surface of the skin before attachment that it is difficult to capture them. An application of kerosene or 95 percent alcohol will kill the larvae quite readily. As soon as possible after exposure, it is advantageous to apply a thick larger of soap to the affected parts, allowing it to remain for 10 minutes or more before bathing. Even though the larvae may be removed or killed soon after attachment, usually enough secretion has been introduced into the skin to cause the characteristic itching lesion, and for this there is no known specific remedy. The intense itching may be temporarily relieved by ammonia or strong salt water.

In the summer and early fall when it is necessary to go into fields of tall weeds or grass, into berry patches, or wherever there is heavy undergrowth, an efficacious measure to prevent attack by chiggers is the liberal sprinkling of the stockings and underclothing with flowers of sulfur.
Some authors have stated that the spraying of the shoes, stockings, and trouser legs with one of the proprietary fly-repellent preparations is successful in warding off attacks by chiggers.

CAPITAL TENSE IN DEBATE OVER U. S. SECURITY

World War Days Recalled
As Rival Forces Use
Different Methods

BITTER CHARGES HEARD

Question Of Safety Vital;
Two Camps Form With
Views Varied

WASHINGTON, August 7.—A tenseness, unequalled since World War days, is rapidly taking Washington by the throat.

The excessive bitterness which has marked congressional debate during the last few days is generally regarded in Washington as a fairly accurate mirror of the feeling which has permeated the capital since the fall of France.

Charges of "slacker," "Fifth Columnist," "Nazi agent," "British agent," "war monger" and similar accusations which have punctuated the debate of the lawmakers are viewed as actually the outward manifestation of two bitterly opposed camps:

1. Those who are sincerely convinced that a movement is under way to throw the United States into the war within the next few months, and;

2. Those who appear to be convinced that if Great Britain suffers the same fate as France, Germany may invade the Western Hemisphere almost immediately.

In the first group the most active leaders have been Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, former Secretary of War Woodring, Senators Wheeler (D) Mont., Hiram Johnson (R) Calif., Bennett Clark (D) Mo., Holt (D) W. Va., and John L. Lewis, of the CIO.

In the second group, the most active have been Gen. John J. Pershing, Secretary of War Stimson; Chairman Sheppard, of the senate military affairs committee, Chairman Key Pittman, of the senate foreign relations committee, and Senators Pepper (D) Fla., Lee (D) Okla., and Minton (D) Ind.

Charges hurled The bitterness reached its peak in the senate during the last 48 hours when Pepper accused Lindbergh of being "the chief of the fifth column in this country," while Minton was charging Holt with coming from a family of world war "slackers."

Replies made to these and similar attacks that have occurred in the last two months uniformly have included charges of fealty to Britain, "inciting war hysteria," and a desire to lead the United States into war.

Actually, the opposing forces claim objectives far different from those attributed to them by each other. The Lindbergh - Wheeler-Woodring followers state that theirs is only a movement to keep the United States out of war. The Pershing-Stimson - Pittman group contends its only aim is to make certain this country is adequately prepared to defend itself against possible invasion.

But out of it all, the wedge between them is being driven deeper and deeper, and the gall and wormwood is being split with more and more bitterness daily. Procedure, particularly in the senate, has gotten out of hand on an increasing number of occasions, while differences aired in public are being carried into the privacy of the cloakrooms on a personal basis.

Contemporary historians, meanwhile, furrow their brows and recall that only a scant 24 years ago, the nation's history was being written in a vitriol that was strikingly parallel.

CONVICT, 23, DROWNS IN SCIOTO; BODY RECOVERED

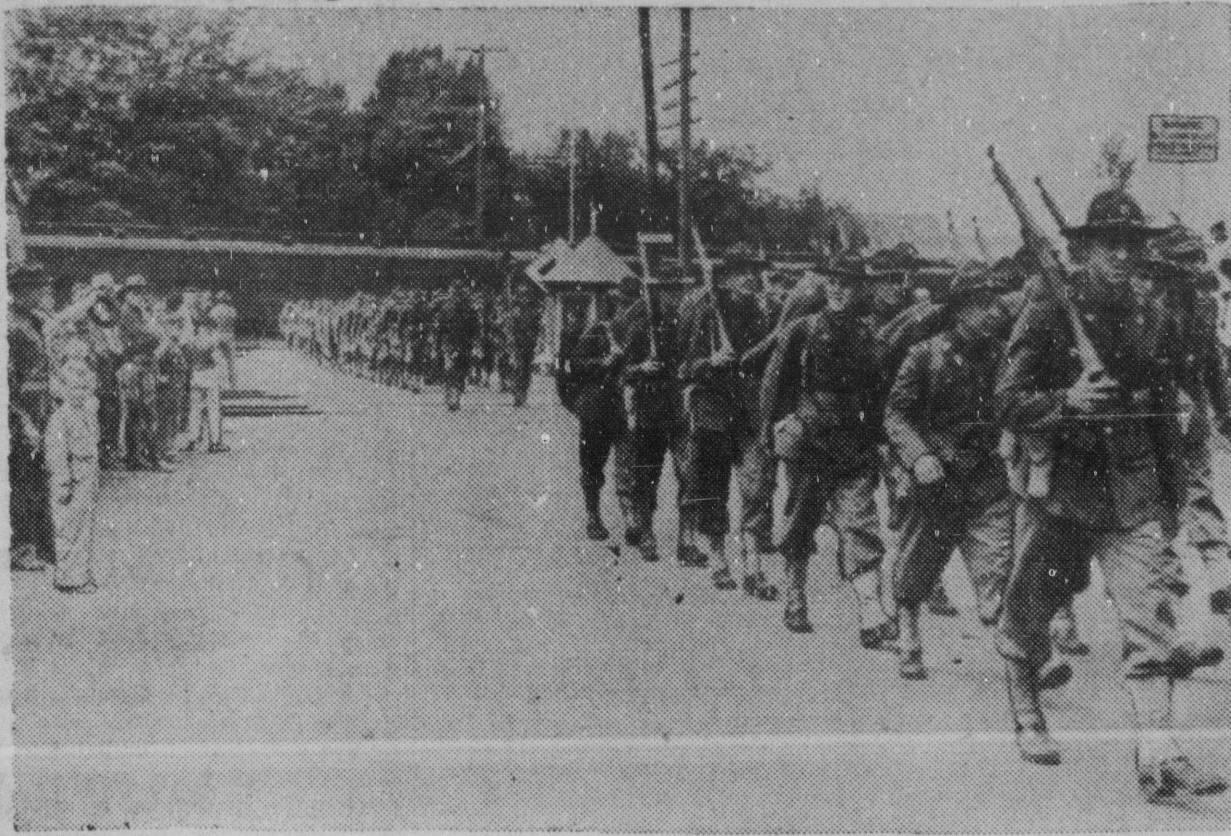

CHILLICOTHE, August 7.—Ben Turner, 23, an inmate of the Federal Industrial Reformatory, drowned in the Scioto River Tuesday. Searchers from the office of Sheriff Joseph Vincent recovered the body late Tuesday afternoon.

They said Turner and another inmate of the institution had been burning trash along the river when they decided to take a swim. Turner sank while the rest of the work crew watched from the bank, unable to assist him.

He was convicted in Florida courts of charges of forgery, and was sentenced to the reformatory April 6, 1939.

A man isn't necessarily great because everybody abuses him.

Dr. Blackburn Discusses Chiggers, Their Method Of Attack, Treatment

With the chigger season at hand, Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, has written the following article for the benefit of chigger sufferers, stating how chiggers may be treated and prevented.

CHIGGER MITES

Chiggers are larval forms of various species of mites belonging to the family Trombididae, commonly known as harvest mites.

Many different species of chiggers are known to attack vertebrate hosts, but only two chigger mites attacking man have been recognized from the United States, one, the common North American chigger, and the other a closely related form found in the northern part of the Mississippi Valley.

If it is known that there has been exposure to chiggers the skin should be examined, preferably with a hand lens, for the active larvae. However, they are so minute and they move so rapidly over the surface of the skin before attachment that it is difficult to capture them. An application of kerosene or 95 percent alcohol will kill the larvae quite readily. As soon as possible after exposure, it is advantageous to apply a thick layer of soap to the affected parts, allowing it to remain for 10 minutes or more before bathing. Even though the larvae may be removed or killed soon after attachment, usually enough secretion has been introduced into the skin to cause the characteristic itching lesion, and for this there is no known specific remedy. The intense itching may be temporarily relieved by ammonia or strong salt water.

In the summer and early fall when it is necessary to go into fields of tall weeds or grass, into berry patches, or wherever there is heavy undergrowth, an efficacious measure to prevent attack by chiggers is the liberal sprinkling of the stockings and underclothing with flowers of sulfur. by a "General Sander" of the German air force, warning that the German invasion will come in a manner the British do not expect and that London is a tempting target for Nazi bombers, seemed to make little impression on the British.

More important to Londoners this morning was news anticipated from Cairo — the expected word that Italy has opened a major drive over Egypt against the Suez Canal.

Preparing to resist this offensive when it is launched, the British command at Cairo announced that the first phase of fighting along the Libyan border has ended with the British "dominating" the border despite "greatly superior Italian forces."

The British claimed that an Italian attempt to invade Egypt across the Libyan border had been turned back and that the British themselves had then invaded the northeastern section of Libya.

A the same time the Italians were driving against strong British resistance in British Somaliland in an effort to reach the Gulf of Eden.

BERLIN, August 7—Aerial attacks on British air bases, aircraft plants and armament works and the sinking of 30,000 tons of British shipping by a single German warship were announced by the German war communiqué today.

"One German warship sank 30,000 tons of enemy shipping in overseas waters," the military bulletin said.

"The German air force bombed air bases at Tynemouth and St. Athan and the Vickers-Armstrong aircraft works at Chester as well as armament plants at Swansea, South Wales.

"A small number of British planes dropped bombs on Holland and western Germany last night without causing noteworthy damage."

LONDON, August 7—Cheered by claims of victory over Italian forces in the "first phase" of operations along the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, Britons turned their chief attention today to the "Battle of Africa."

Fighting on the Libyan border desert and in the wilds of British Somaliland even—for the time being—took precedence over guesswork as to when Germany's promised invasion of the British Isles will be attempted.

As the nation awaited the latest news from the western desert and from Somaliland, word was expected at any moment that the Italians have launched a drive aimed against Egypt and ultimately against Britain's vital "life-line," the Suez Canal.

British strategy to meet such an assault has been complete for a long time and is based on knowledge that the numerically superior Italian forces will try to push against the coastal zone, according to London authorities.

In this connection British naval units are expected to play an important part in the fighting.

From a purely military point of view, informed London quarters do not expect that the British will risk valuable personnel merely to hold desert outposts of small strategic value.

Thus real fighting may not occur at the beginning of the campaign, but may await the moment when Italian lines of communication are lengthened and mechanical transport vehicles are far from their bases and become comparatively easy marks for aerial strafing.

The situation in Somaliland, it was stated, is bound to be wrapped in virtual silence and secrecy for some time, since operations there are believed to be progressing along lines of guerrilla warfare.

Italy's Somaliland push is thought to have the ultimate aim of "neutralizing" Britain's key fortress at Aden.

ROME, August 7—Heavy Italian bombing attacks on British positions in North Africa, East Africa and the Holy Land were announced by the Italian high command today amid growing signs that a major Italian drive against the Suez Canal is imminent.

In addition, it was claimed, Italian columns have crossed the border into British Somaliland "at several points."

While the military bulletin told of widespread and damaging air raids, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Tevere, headlined:

"This is the eve of action in Cyrenaica (Libya)."

The Italian war communiqué stated:

"Italian air formations bombed Haifa setting still other oil tanks on fire and hitting the port."

"In the first air raid on Haifa fires were started that lasted several days. In the second bombing

NEW YORK, August 7—

"Agents of Hitler" can be expected to utilize every possible means to try to defeat the pending military conscription bill, Grenville Clark, an attorney, asserted today in replying to attacks on himself and other leaders of the Military Training Camps Association by Sen. Rush Holt of West Virginia in the senate yesterday.

Holt's attacks are to be expected "in view of the source from which they come," Clark said in a statement issued at Dublin, N. H. "Every demagogic effort, every device of false rumor and misstatement, every intrigue of the agents of Hitler may now be expected to try to defeat this bill," Clark said of the pending Burke-Wadsworth compulsory selective service measure. "But it will pass, because the time has come for Americans to stand up and be counted and to decide whether America is to follow the judgment of Roosevelt, Pershing, Stimson and Marshal or of Senator Holt and his like."

Col. Julius Ochs Adler of the New York Times said the meeting of the association at which plans for its drive for compulsory military service were drawn was not secret and was well publicized in the press. Of Holt's charges that he favored the bill for selective service to protect his foreign investments, Adler declared his only investments were in the New York Times and affiliated companies and government bonds.

JUDGE HEARING McCRADY MOVE FOR NEW TRIAL

Evidence to determine whether a new trial should be granted to William F. McCrady in his $13,361.40 damage suit against the Benedict Transportation Company was heard in Common Pleas Court Wednesday, Judge Phil A. Henderson of Logan, presiding. The plaintiff's attorneys contended that due to the alleged misconduct of one of the jurors hearing the case, the plaintiff had not received a just and impartial trial as prescribed by law. Judge Henderson told litigants of the case that he would submit his decision Monday.

The suit originated from an accident on Route 23 near the Mackey Ford Road on March 13, 1936, when a car in which John McCrady, 26, son of the plaintiff, Bernard Dowden, 19, and Asa Elsea, 29, were riding, collided with a Benedict truck. All three youths were killed.

Mrs. Ruth Elsea, administratrix of the estate of Asa Elsea, collected $5,666.66 from the trucking company. A suit asking damages for the Dowden youth's death is still pending.

SPOKESMAN FOR IL DUCE FLAYS HULL'S SPEECH

ROME, August 7—In an editorial bitterly attacking United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull for his "insinuations" against the totalitarian countries, Virginia Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, today predicted that new and undisclosed offensive forces would soon join Germany and Italy in the war against Great Britain.

At the same time Gayda, generally regarded as the press spokesman for Premier Mussolini, emphatically repudiated all suggestions that the Rome-Berlin axis plans at this or any other time to carry the war into the Western Hemisphere.

(Editor's Note: Gayda's criticism of Hull apparently was based on a statement issued by the secretary yesterday in which he pleaded for sacrifices by all the republics of the Western Hemisphere in behalf of armaments to protect themselves from the "wild and destructive forces now at large in the world."

JUDGE HEARING McCRA DY MOVE FOR NEW TRIAL

Evidence to determine whether a new trial should be granted to William F. McCrady in his $13,361.40 damage suit against the Benedict Transportation Company was heard in Common Pleas Court Wednesday, Judge Phil A. Henderson of Logan, presiding. The plaintiff's attorneys contended that due to the alleged misconduct of one of the jurors hearing the case, the plaintiff had not received a just and impartial trial as prescribed by law. Judge Henderson told litigants of the case that he would submit his decision Monday.

The suit originated from an accident on Route 23 near the Mackey Ford Road on March 13, 1936, when a car in which John McCrady, 26, son of the plaintiff, Bernard Dowden, 19, and Asa Elsea, 29, were riding, collided with a Benedict truck. All three youths were killed.

Mrs. Ruth Elsea, administratrix of the estate of Asa Elsea, collected $5,666.66 from the trucking company. A suit asking damages for the Dowden youth's death is still pending.

SPOKESMAN FOR IL DUCE FLAYS HULL'S SPEECH

ROME, August 7—In an editorial bitterly attacking United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull for his "insinuations" against the totalitarian countries, Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, today predicted that new and undisclosed offensive forces would soon join Germany and Italy in the war against Great Britain.

At the same time Gayda, generally regarded as the press spokesman for Premier Mussolini, emphatically repudiated all suggestions that the Rome-Berlin axis plans at this or any other time to carry the war into the Western Hemisphere.

"In view of the discretion and silence maintained by Germany and Italy regarding the internal and external affairs of the United States," Gayda wrote in the Giornale d'Italia, "we expect a similar discretion on the part of North American citizens — and statesmen."

WPA Approves 17 Millions

Facilities

WASHINGTON, August 7 — A Civil Aeronautics Authority survey today disclosed that there are only 78 military landing fields in the United States and Alaska—a startling few when compared with President Roosevelt's national defense goal of an airforce of 50,000 fighting airplanes.

At the same time, the report reveals that there are 2,655 landing fields in Alaska and the United States. Alaska, only a comparatively short distance from Russia and Japan, ranks high on the list of the number of airports, however.

Only two states—California and Texas—rank above the far northern territory which now has 128 airports. California has 186 and Texas 151.

W.P.A. Aids

Seeking to step-up facilities for the nation's armed forces, the Works Progress Administration has approved $17,000,000 for construction work at army and navy posts, which includes improvements of airplane landing fields.

While the survey showed an increase of 204 landing facilities from the first of the year to July 1, only 20 bases were reported for naval planes and 58 for the army.

The total number of airports, landing fields and seaplane bases in this country, beside the 78 service fields, includes 646 municipal and 495 commercial airports, 282 CAA intermediate fields, 653 auxiliary fields and 191 miscellaneous government, private and state airports and landing fields. Of these 775 are either fully or partially lighted for night flying.

Seaplane Bases Increased
Should emergency develop, however, many of these fields could possibly be converted into service ports for both army and navy fighters.

Seaplane mooring floats for the Navy, Coast Guard, Army and Marine Corps bases, constructed under a joint program of the CAA and the National Youth Administration, accounted for a large percentage in the increase of landing facilities.

in Washington and not likely to taken an active part in the Nebraska campaign unless baited into it. And they vigorously counseled that this be avoided if possible.

"There is no need stirring up Norris if we don't have to, advised State Chairman Wherry. "He can cause a lot of trouble."

SUB SCARE

The shipload of congressional and other guests had a gala time on the maiden trip of the new U. S. S. America, but they also got the scare of their lives.

The incident arose out of a chance remark during a ship-to-shore broadcast from the bridge when the vessel was well out to sea. Captain Giles Stedman was giving the position of the ship.

"We are exactly 95 miles due east of Atlantic City," he said.

"Holy smoke," broke in someone. "What a sweet spot for a German submarine! Better be careful, captain."

Stedman smiled and no one thought any more about it until later when the big liner suddenly began to zigzag crazily. In the twinkling of an eye the rumor was skyrocketing among the passengers that a U-boat was stalking the vessel.

Near pandemonium broke out. Some guests, including at least one senator and several congressmen, rushed to their staterooms and donned life preservers. After several minutes of panicky confusion, the alarm was dispelled by word from the bridge that the ship was not trying to escape a sub.

"Only testing the engines," was the explanation. "There is no danger of any kind. Go back to your drinks."

HARRY HOPKINS

There was one piece of advice the Democratic National Committee group gave the President when they conferred with him last Thursday. It was short and snappy. "Keep Hopkins out of the campaign!"

This was not the first time Roosevelt had been told this since the noise-some Chicago convention, where the idealistic but politically inept Secretary of Commerce held forth as White House generalissimo amid a continuous roar of resounding blunders. Others have voiced the same pointed counsel.

In fact, one of the most significant recent inner-Administration developments is the unanimity of view that Hopkins is a trouble-

making influence around the President.

What gives weight to this undercurrent feeling is that some of the sharpest critics are New Deal bigwigs who have been Hopkins' closest friends and were his staunchest defenders when he was under fire during his WPA days.

But like the regulars, they now hold that his residence in the White House and constant ready access to Roosevelt's ear is very harmful.

Specifically, it is being charged that Hopkins is preventing the President from obtaining realistic information on important situations, is giving him unsound and timid advice, and is keeping hard-hitting fighters from his councils.

One of the most serious accusations against Hopkins is that he won, and is keeping, his behind-the-throne place by the policy of never standing up against Roosevelt on issues.

It is one of the President's weaknesses that he doesn't like tough-willed advisers. He will listen to suggestions and argument, but once he has made up his mind he is irritated by continued resistance. Unlike other inner-circles who stubbornly hold to their contentions, Hopkins never goes beyond a certain point.

He will lay proposals before Roosevelt, but if the President draws back and manifests disapproval, Hopkins backs down and runs for cover.

Note—Hopkins is one of the most difficult men to see in Washington. It is far harder to get to him than to the President. Even officials of the Commerce Department have trouble getting to him directly.

BERMUDA READY TO GREET DUKE ON HIS ARRIVAL

HAMILTON, Bermuda, August 7—En route to the Bahamas, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor will arrive in Bermuda aboard the American steamer Excalibur tomorrow afternoon, according to an announcement by Colonial Secretary Eric Dutton today.

The former British king, who will assume his post as governor of the Bahama Islands, and his American-born wife will receive a royal salute when they step ashore. A guard of honor will be lined up when they are greeted by Governor General Sir Denis Barnard of Bermuda and his sister, Mrs. Hastings Brooke.

According to present plans the duke and duchess will remain in Bermuda pending arrival of a steamer to take them to Nassau.

Insiders are saying now that this country is a "non-belligerent ally."

DeMILLE PLAYS

Cecil B. DeMille spent a hot afternoon on his boat off the lower California coast last week reading, of all things, Christmas and New Year plays for possible use in the Radio Theatre. The Christmas plays usually are selected far ahead of production because they are sometimes difficult to find. There's a scarcity of suitable Christmas plays on the market and the show always makes sure it is not caught in December without one.

TROTTER DIET

John Scott Trotter, the rotund Music Hall bandleader who went on a diet and lost 40 pounds, reports that the pounds "are coming back ten-by-ten." The real reason Trotter is getting his weight back is a playful conspiracy among friends. When Trotter said on the air that he had lost 40 pounds and was still on the diet, his friends playfully sent him pies and cakes and other delicacies on his restricted list. Others invited him over to dinner. Trotter couldn't resist the food.

SWING'S PEACE MOVE

What was probably the first informal peace mission of World War I was undertaken in 1915 by Raymond Gram Swing at the request of the German Chancellor,

Bethmann Hollweg, according to a story on the famed commentator in the August issue of "Current History."

The Chancellor asked Swing, then Berlin correspondent for an American newspaper, to take a peace offer as his personal emissary to the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, with the assurance "that Germany will annex no Belgian territory and will guarantee Belgium's complete independence." To this statement Hollweg added: "But you must tell him (Grey) that in the peace Germany will want an indemnity for having been forced into this war."

When Swing, two days later, delivered the message at the Foreign Office in London, Grey became adamant at the mention of the indemnity and dismissed the offer with utter finality after giving the American newspaperman a glowing lecture on the world of international law and moral standards which would arise from the ashes of the war.

Seeking to step-up facilities for the nation's armed forces, the Works Progress Administration has approved $17,000,000 for construction work at army and navy posts, which includes improvements of airplane landing fields.

While the survey showed an increase of 204 landing facilities from the first of the year to July 1, only 20 bases were reported for naval planes and 58 for the army.

The total number of airports, landing fields and seaplane bases in this country, beside the 78 service fields, includes 646 municipal and 495 commercial airports, 282 CAA intermediate fields, 653 auxiliary fields and 191 miscellaneous government, private and state airports and landing fields. Of these 775 are either fully or partially lighted for night flying.

Seaplane Bases Increased
Should emergency develop, however, many of these fields could possibly be converted into service ports for both army and navy fighters.

Seaplane mooring floats for the Navy, Coast Guard, Army and Marine Corps bases, constructed under a joint program of the CAA and the National Youth Administration, accounted for a large percentage in the increase of landing facilities.

in Washington and not likely to taken an active part in the Nebraska campaign unless baited into it. And they vigorously counselled that this be avoided if possible.
"There is no need stirring up Norris if we don't have to, advised State Chairman Wherry. "He can cause a lot of trouble."

SUB SCARE
The shipload of congressional and other guests had a gala time on the maiden trip of the new U. S. S. America, but they also got the scare of their lives.

The incident arose out of a chance remark during a ship-to-shore broadcast from the bridge when the vessel was well out to sea. Captain Giles Stedman was giving the position of the ship.

"We are exactly 95 miles due east of Atlantic City," he said.

"Holy smoke," broke in someone. "What a sweet spot for a German submarine! Better be careful, captain."

Stedman smiled and no one thought any more about it until later when the big liner suddenly began to zigzag crazily. In the twinkling of an eye the rumor was skyrocketing among the passengers that a U-boat was stalking the vessel.

Near pandemonium broke out. Some guests, including at least one senator and several congressmen, rushed to their staterooms and donned life preservers. After several minutes of panicky confusion, the alarm was dispelled by word from the bridge that the ship was not trying to escape a sub.

"Only testing the engines," was the explanation. "There is no danger of any kind. Go back to your drinks."

HARRY HOPKINS

There was one piece of advice the Democratic National Committee group gave the President when they conferred with him last Thursday. It was short and snappy. "Keep Hopkins out of the campaign!"

This was not the first time Roosevelt had been told this since the noise-some Chicago convention, where the idealistic but politically inept Secretary of Commerce held forth as White House generalissimo amid a continuous roar of resounding blunders. Others have voiced the same point-of-counsel.

In fact, one of the most significant recent inner-Administration developments is the unanimity of view that Hopkins is a trouble-

making influence around the President.

What gives weight to this undercurrent feeling is that some of the sharpest critics are New Deal bigwigs who have been Hopkins' closest friends and were his staunchest defenders when he was under fire during his WPA days.

But like the regulars, they now hold that his residence in the White House and constant ready access to Roosevelt's ear is very harmful.

Specifically, it is being charged that Hopkins is preventing the President from obtaining realistic information on important situations, is giving him unsound and timid advice, and is keeping hard-hitting fighters from his councils.

One of the most serious accusations against Hopkins is that he won, and is keeping, his behind-the-throne place by the policy of never standing up against Roosevelt on issues.

It is one of the President's weaknesses that he doesn't like tough-willed advisers. He will listen to suggestions and argument, but once he has made up his mind he is irritated by continued resistance. Unlike other inner-circleers who stubbornly hold to their contentions, Hopkins never goes beyond a certain point.

He will lay proposals before Roosevelt, but if the President draws back and manifests disapproval, Hopkins backs down and runs for cover.

Note—Hopkins is one of the most difficult men to see in Washington. It is far harder to get to him than to the President. Even officials of the Commerce Department have trouble getting to him directly.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Few people at the Havana Conference were aware that Milo Perkins, head of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation was there too. He was not on the official list, but he worked behind the scenes laying groundwork for disposal of hemisphere surpluses. Perkins was so busy he had to cancel a side trip to the Virgin Islands. . . . The State Department is assisting in transmission of funds to individual Americans in France. Checks are made out here to the Secretary of State, and transmitted through diplomatic channels. . . . Hull came back from Havana to find a freshly painted ceiling and new overhead lights in his office. . . . White House photographers are now required to wear badges for identification.

BERMUDA READY TO GREET DUKE ON HIS ARRIVAL

HAMILTON, Bermuda, August 7.—En route to the Bahamas, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor will arrive in Bermuda aboard the American steamer Excalibur tomorrow afternoon, according to an announcement by Colonial Secretary Eric Dutton today.

The former British king, who will assume his post as governor of the Bahama Islands, and his American-born wife will receive a royal salute when they step ashore. A guard of honor will be lined up when they are greeted by Governor General Sir Denis Barnard of Bermuda and his sister, Mrs. Hastings Brooke.

According to present plans the duke and duchess will remain in Bermuda pending arrival of a steamer to take them to Nassau.

Insiders are saying now that this country is a "non-belligerent ally."

DeMILLE PLAYS

Cecil B. DeMille spent a hot afternoon on his boat off the lower California coast last week reading, of all things, Christmas and New Year plays for possible use in the Radio Theatre. The Christmas plays usually are selected far ahead of production because they are sometimes difficult to find. There's a scarcity of suitable Christmas plays on the market and the show always makes sure it is not caught in December without one.

TROTTER DIET

John Scott Trotter, the rotund Music Hall bandleader who went on a diet and lost 40 pounds, reports that the pounds "are coming back ten-by-ten." The real reason Trotter is getting his weight back is a playful conspiracy among friends. When Trotter said on the air that he had lost 40 pounds and was still on the diet, his friends playfully sent him pies and cakes and other delicacies on his restricted list. Others invited him over to dinner. Trotter couldn't resist the food.

SWING'S PEACE MOVE

What was probably the first informal peace mission of World War I was undertaken in 1915 by Raymond Gram Swing at the request of the German Chancellor,

Bethmann Hollweg, according to a story on the famed commentator in the August issue of "Current History."

The Chancellor asked Swing, then Berlin correspondent for an American newspaper, to take a peace offer as his personal emissary to the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, with the assurance "that Germany will annex no Belgian territory and will guarantee Belgium's complete independence." To this statement Hollweg added: "But you must tell him (Grey) that in the peace Germany will want an indemnity for having been forced into this war."

When Swing, two days later, delivered the message at the Foreign Office in London, Grey became adamant at the mention of the indemnity and dismissed the offer with utter finality after giving the American newspaperman a glowing lecture on the world of international law and moral standards which would arise from the ashes of the war.

POWER AND DEFENSE

NATIONAL defense now calls for the power of the TVA. Muscle Shoals is ready to make nitrates for explosives. It is already making phosphate fertilizer used to conserve and restore the eroded soils of the South. Power generated there and elsewhere over the huge area of the Tennessee Valley is ready to be used for manufacture. Key defense industries can be located to advantage in the valley, which is sheltered on the east by a chain of mountains, and is too far inland for any serious attack.

It is well to know that both political parties now realize that TVA is not properly a political football, but one of the great means of using natural resources for the nation's good.

TOOL ENGINEERS

THERE is an acute shortage of skilled tool engineers. The American Society of Tool Engineers is trying to meet the problem by increased training. The Society has been finding that quite aside from the needs created by war orders, American industry is still short of skilled help to meet its current domestic demands.

One of the saddest effects of a long depression is this loss by a nation of its individual skills. Middle-aged men who had the training die off or become rusty and awkward because of the disuse of their powers. Boys in their late teens who should have been learning how to use their hands grow into their twenties without mechanical education. Now comes the sudden call for thousands of these skilled workmen and they do not exist. The men are ready but their abilities must be developed. Between 60,000 and 70,000 tool engineers and almost half a million skilled mechanics are urgently needed. It may not yet be too late. But certain it is that their training cannot begin too soon.

PROGRESSIVE HEN

MR. R. B. SMITH of Wanaque, N. J., drove to the home of his friend John Hartly to show off his nice new car. A few minutes later he heard a hen cackling in the direction of his parking place. He found a small new-laid egg on the front seat of the car and saw a bantam hen leaving by way of a window.

She does that every time a new car stops here," said Mr. Hartly proudly.

Now of course hens can be as intelligent in their way as other creatures in theirs. But serious psychological problems are here involved. Why does a hen lay an egg in a car? So her offspring may go far? If so, it's easy to see why she

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

FOR THE first time since Civil war days Democratic party leaders are discussing plans for a vigorous campaign to hold the Solid South in the coming presidential election.

Heretofore they've reckoned that the southern states didn't need much attention; they were bound to go Democratic, anyway.

Now, however, they're getting reports of considerable southern grumbling over the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket. It also is well known that Republican Chairman Joseph Martin is going to make a hard fight throughout Dixie for Willkie and McNary. In the past, the Republicans like the Democrats have paid little attention to that part of the country; not because they didn't wish they could win it over, but because they didn't believe they could possibly do so.

Southern Republicans' votes have been prized at G. O. P. conventions, inasmuch as they were useful in swinging nominations, but it wasn't considered that there were enough of them to be worth trying for in November.

This time, though, with Chairman Martin as Republican hopeful as he is evidently is, and with their own local observers in the southland hinting at a certain amount of uneasiness, New Deal strategists are tending to the view that southern voters need some intensive cultivation.

SOUTHERN STATESMANSHIP

Southern statesmanship, as distinguished from the rank-and-file of the electorate, isn't expected, even by the Willkies, to do much out-and-out bolting from the Democratic nominees.

It's largely disgruntled, but it can't abandon the Democratic party in favor of any other party that suits it any better.

Apparently, like Senator (Cotton) Ed Smith, it simply will resort to "passive resistance," a sit-down strike. It will stay on the premises but it won't do a lick for the Democratic ticket. That is to say, to a considerable extent it won't.

New Deal leaders recognize that such a situation requires some counteracting.

Just how they'll go about it isn't quite apparent yet.

For one thing, their national committee is scarcely functioning, with Chairman Farley just quitting. They doubtless trust in providence, too, that the southern atmosphere, too, that the southern atmosphere presently will improve, from their standpoint.

Yet they generally agree that this isn't a year in which the south can safely be neglected.

Chairman Martin isn't giving them long to think about it, either.

REPUBLICAN CLAIMS

The Willkies probably claim too much to Dixie.

To hear their spokesmen talk about it, one would guess that they'll clean up everything below the Mason-Dixon line. They themselves undoubtedly don't really anticipate all that.

Herbert Hoover actually did carry four southern states in 1928, but, to defeat Al Smith in that year, he didn't have to have them.

If Willkie can do that well, he and Joe Martin unquestionably will be well satisfied. They'll depend on that showing, plus what they're counting on in the north to put Wendell and Charley McNary over.

I believe they truly are optimistic as to Texas, where they're convinced the voters are deeply resentful of the fate of Vice President (Cactus Jack) Garner. It's understandable that they may be.

Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina also are conspicuously mentioned (by Republicans) as G. O. P. possibilities. They have no outstanding citizens of their own who were as ostentatiously slaughtered at the Chicago convention as Garner was. Nevertheless, the Republicans have hopes of them.

At all events, Willkie clubs are being organized all over Dixie. The G. O. P. at least, considers Dixie worth fighting for, for the first time in two or three generations.

And the Democrats consider it doubtful enough to be worth fighting for.

SURVEY OF ARMS STRENGTH

WASHINGTON—Several careful secret surveys made recently of Japanese military and naval strength indicate that Japan can do just about anything she wants in the Far East.

The reports show that the Japanese Navy is in A-1 shape, and has suffered not a bit as a result of the Chinese war. The Japanese Army also is in good shape, though not in the same conditions as the Navy. The Chinese war, though still dragging on at heavy cost, has been an excellent training school for the Japanese military.

Chief handicap under which Japan suffers is her desperate economic situation. Easiest remedy for this is to take the Dutch East Indies and the wealth possessions of the Dutch, French and British in Southern Asia.

This is what seems sure to happen. There is no question but that the Japanese can take French Indo-China, the Dutch possessions of Java and Sumatra, and all the other South Pacific islands that are worth bothering about, in a few weeks.

Only spot which might hold out is the British naval base at Singapore, and naval experts disagree as to whether the Japanese could take it or not. In time, they probably could.

Everything now seems set for the Japanese to steam south simultaneously with the Hitler blitzkrieg against Britain. Probably the Japanese will wait until they see how the blitzkrieg is going before they stage theirs in the South Pacific.

TNT—DON'T TOUCH

Nebraska Republicans are very enthusiastic about Wendell Willkie, but they want no speech by him in McCook, home town of Senator George Norris, the State's veteran public-power crusader.

Such a plan was reported shortly after Willkie arrived at his Colorado vacation spot, which is near McCook. News dispatches declared that the GOP standard bearer intended to beard the father of TVA right in his own home town. But the idea did not thrill Nebraska Republican leaders.

They have a wholesome respect for Norris' vote-swinging powers, recall vividly how four years ago in a three-cornered race which he entered at the last moment he polled 53 percent of the vote.

So last week a delegation made a pilgrimage to Willkie. In the group were Kenneth Wherry, State Chairman; George Carpenter, National Committeeman; Hugh Butler, candidate for senator, and Dwight Griswold, candidate for governor. They received a cordial welcome and discussed a number of subjects, prominent among which was a strong argument as to why Willkie should NOT make a speech in McCook.

It was pointed out that Norris is not up for re-election this year, that he is busy picks a new car. The chances are that said offspring can go farther.

But how does she know it's a new car? And what does a hen think about when she's laying an egg? What do hens think about, anyhow?

DIET AND HEALTH

Save Every Tooth

● A CORRESPONDENT writes, "In connection with your article on arthritis I have a question to ask and that is in connection with dead teeth. Should one with arthritis have all his dead teeth extracted?"

It is a very good question. Questions are good in proportion to the difficulty one has in answering them. So if this is very good, you must expect the answer to be somewhat qualified.

The principles which form the background of the question are: Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

first, the idea that arthritis is caused by focal infection; that the inflammation of the joints in arthritis gets there from some such focal point as the teeth or tonsils; second, that dead teeth are dead because they have been the seat of infection.

A dead tooth is one in which the nerve is degenerated and the pulp has consequently atrophied. Nearly always this has been caused by a previous infection arising from a filling. Dead teeth often have begun with apical abscesses—these become sterile and harmless, but they are a potential source of reinfection.

So the question comes down to how much infection a dead tooth carries, and how much harm it is doing to the arthritis. This can only be determined in each individual case; no more general rule can be laid down.

Dentists and physicians are becoming more conservative about this whole matter. After all, teeth are very valuable adjuncts to nutrition. If a dead tooth is not actually doing any harm, it may be doing a great deal of good. The far of radical exodontia is distinctly losing its momentum. For years we have been in an orgy of tooth pulling. An eminent dental authority said recently that every dentist should do his utmost to place all infected teeth in a healthy condition, and only when that has failed should extraction be considered.

The head of a large memorial dental clinic states that the fact that a tooth has lost its pulp (nerve), or that a degenerative change has taken place around the root end, are not of themselves sufficient reasons for extraction.

More Conservative

The theory of focal infection also has undergone a somewhat conservative change. Dr. Charles Mayo said: "the future of medical science rests with the doctor who can stop or kill the germs as they develop in the mouth." The future of medical science is a somewhat large order. Doctor Rosenow, one of the leaders of the focal infection idea, writes: "I do not advocate wrecking the mouth," adding later, "but I do believe a tooth is only a tooth, while a life is worth more than all the teeth in the world."

Doubts about the relation of focal infection to many human diseases are recently expressed by Drs. Arnett and Ennis, who say: "no statistically significant association can be demonstrated between dental infection of teeth and underweight, arthritis, kidney disease, chorea or heart disease."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

North explained that his partner's reverse bidding showed more hearts than spades, so that he knew the side had at least as many cards in hearts, plus a longer suit for purposes of safety. That is why he showed preference for hearts.

Peculiarly, the very reason why he preferred hearts should have been the reason for preferring spades. With an even balance of trumps in the two hands, there then would have been an unbalance in the side suit. Consequently, with spades as trumps, the losing club could have been thrown from the North hand on a set-up heart, then South's own losing club could have been ruffed.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

IT WAS hours later when Linda and Ronald faced each other in a small restaurant where fat candles were melting in round holders and the food was too heavy for a summer night. The place was off the beaten track. That was why they had chosen it.

They had a great deal to say to each other. Linda realized, looking at the familiar face across the table, near, dear, and yet so suddenly a stranger.

She played with a fruit cup that she didn't want, and waited for the swing musician who, after all, was Ronnie, who had a way with a horn, to speak.

He pushed the fruit cup away and gathered her restless hands in his.

"Linda, precious, if we are going on together there are some things that we must share, must talk over. It won't help Parrish for you to become involved again in the case. If your evidence is needed, use it, but wait. Maybe you won't have to speak. I'm going along on the tour Linda, after all."

"They just gave me a raise and a better billing and permission to marry. It's what I want. You know how I've always wanted to play my horn!"

The blue eyes begged her to understand and the pressure on her hands deepened.

"Yes, I know, Ronnie," she answered.

"And you'll wait, Linda love?"

Very gently she withdrew her hands. "Ronnie, an old man and woman are frightened to death because of all of this. If Mr. Parrish is guilty, then he'll be discovered. But he isn't. And I can help him now. I can save several weeks of torment. Oh, Ronnie, don't you see?"

A little wind had sprung up in the street outside, making the candles flicker. The waiter took away the untouched fruit cups and brought something in a casserole, but neither one looked at it.

"Linda, I'm asking you to let me decide this!"

"No, Ronnie. I've a duty to do and I'm doing it."

He looked at her as though he had not seen her before. "Sarah said you were—hard."

"Sarah? You talked me over with her? And maybe she advised this?" She put down her napkin.

"I guess our ways divide right here, Ronnie. We—don't follow the same rules any more. We're sort of strangers." She hesitated, waiting for him to say something, to draw her back to her seat or follow her, but when he did nothing she tossed her amber curls higher.

"Good—goodbye, Ronnie." It was just a whisper.

And then she was gone. She began to run. Once she thought eager steps were sounding behind her, but she did not look back. Once she thought someone called her name, but she told herself that it was because she wanted to hear it called.

Well, something was over. At the immensity of it, her knees felt weak. All of her life, since she was eight, she had been journeying to meet Ronnie. Every signpost led to him.

Now what should she do since he was gone? What did other women do? Make masks for their faces and wear them day long and night long?

Because Linda didn't know the answers to her questions she began to walk. She felt curiously empty. She had been walking blocks before she realized that there was a lightness to the emptiness. She was lost and lonely and tomorrow she would wake up and her heart would do the curious things that stories said hearts did when they were suffering, but tonight, for a little space of time, she felt—relieved.

She was ashamed of herself because she did. She tried to remember Ronald's wide shoulders hunched over the table, but all she could hear was his voice begging her not to give her evidence just yet.

She glanced at the name of the street where she was, hailed a taxi-cab, and gave the address of the Central Police station. There was no reason now for withholding her information.

Eventually she reached the office of an assistant prosecutor, who listened attentively.

"I think you may save the man, Miss Avery," he said. "We've tried to account for that missing time. You are sure you have the hour correctly?"

"Certainly. The clerks remember that I was in the coffee shop and that Clarabel telephoned for a milkshake, so I couldn't have done it, and Mr. Parrish was there at the very same time."

Relieved, she left the offices. She was far downtown. She strolled over to the harbor. Boats were in and ferries were leaving. She paid her fare, passed through the turnstile, and climbed on a boat for Staten Island.

As the towers and skyscrapers of Manhattan swung their lamps through soft summer darkness, she caught her breath. This was New York, city of dreams and enchantment and mystery. Not far away the Hoboken ferry was chugging merrily. Ronald had said he would send a card some day from the Hoboken ferry, or Singapore or Trieste. He might just as well have gone to one of the far places on a colored map as to come back and fail her so.

Yet, all of the time, a slow singing was beginning somewhere within her. She did not think about it much at that moment. She concentrated on the fact that Ronald had failed her.

Yet, she mused, as the water churned in white foam around the prow of the small passenger boat, she had not wanted to harm another. He had given when it became necessary. But he did not want to risk his own career.

Maybe Ronald was right and life was a selfish road. Maybe you must think always of your own desires. But if life was that way, it was scarcely worth the living.

No. She would go on as she was. She became aware that someone was watching her. She looked around. No eyes seemed to be studying her. Yet there was that persistence of being guarded.

She did not leave the ferry station, but paid her fare and got back on the boat. She found a place to stand where the night wind would blow her hair and the stars could shine down brightly on the dark water.

"Tomorrow, tomorrow," she whispered, "you'll wake up and know you sent Ronnie away. And maybe he was right. Maybe you were being silly. Maybe you can reach him now!"

There was eagerness in that thought. Then she remembered that it was too late for such an action because she had given her information to the police. But maybe Ronnie would be sorry and repent and ask her forgiveness. Perhaps she should have hurried home instead of going for an aimless ferry ride.

At the thought that maybe Ronald was waiting for her, Linda became tense and restless. She wanted the boat to hurry back to the cyclorama of buildings that swept the skyline.

But even as she thought of that she became aware that the watching eyes were on her again.

Suddenly a strange woman spoke. "Good evening. You are Linda Avery, are you not?"

There was something distantly familiar about the woman. Some place their paths had met briefly once. Some place . . .

"Yes, I'm Linda Avery," she answered, studying the other's face. Then, with a quick recognition, she knew her.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

One man injured, miles of broken telephone poles and snarled wire, unroofed buildings and overturned trees lay in the wake of the worst cyclonic storm Pickaway County had experienced in many years.

Dick Plum and Ned Harden of Circleville left for a ten day stay at the Hi-V camp, Camp Nelson Dodd, near Mt. Vernon, as delegates of the local club.

Miss Bertha Allen of New York City, house guest of Mrs. Helen Gunning, East Main Street, was honor guest at two parties when Mrs. H. D. Jackson entertained at a one o'clock luncheon at the Pickaway Country Club for a Circleville club of which Miss Allen was a former member, and Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker were hosts at an informal dinner at the New American Hotel Coffee Shop. Harold Clarke of Philadelphia was the only out-of-town guest.

10 YEAR SAGO

A cigarette, carelessly tossed from a passing automobile, was blamed for the loss of 50 loads of fertilizer and the burning of eight acres of pasture land on the J. N. Bower farm on the pike between Kingston and Hallsville.

Williamsport, Chillicothe and Camp Sherman fire departments were called to Clarksville to help control a fire which started in the hay pile of the Dr. Harry B. Ware residence. The flames threatened a large barn in the rear of the house.

Lawrence Liston of Ashville, accompanied by his father, Robert Liston of the Scioto Trail, his brothers, Forrest Liston, of Dayton and Willis Liston of Circleville left for Imogene, Ia. They visited William Liston and family and the children of the late Simon Liston, who had gone to Iowa 36 years before.

POWER AND DEFENSE

NATIONAL defense now calls for the power of the TVA. Muscle Shoals is ready to make nitrates for explosives. It is already making phosphate fertilizer used to conserve and restore the eroded soils of the South. Power generated there and elsewhere over the huge area of the Tennessee Valley is ready to be used for manufacture. Key defense industries can be located to advantage in the valley, which is sheltered on the east by a chain of mountains, and is too far inland for any serious attack.

It is well to know that both political parties now realize that TVA is not properly a political football, but one of the great means of using natural resources for the nation's good.

TOOL ENGINEERS

THERE is an acute shortage of skilled tool engineers. The American Society of Tool Engineers is trying to meet the problem by increased training. The Society has been finding that quite aside from the needs created by war orders, American industry is still short of skilled help to meet its current domestic demands.

One of the saddest effects of a long depression is this loss by a nation of its individual skills. Middle-aged men who had the training die off or become rusty and awkward because of the disuse of their powers. Boys in their late teens who should have been learning how to use their hands grow into their twenties without mechanical education. Now comes the sudden call for thousands of these skilled workmen and they do not exist. The men are ready but there abilities must be developed. Between 60,000 and 70,000 tool engineers and almost half a million skilled mechanics are urgently needed. It may not yet be too late. But certain it is that their training cannot begin too soon.

PROGRESSIVE HEN

MR. R. B. SMITH of Wanaque, N. J., drove to the home of his friend John Hart to show off his nice new car. A few minutes later he heard a hen cackling in the direction of his parking place. He found a small new-laid egg on the front seat of the car and saw a bantam hen leaving by way of a window.

She does that every time a new car stops here," said Mr. Hart proudly.

Now of course hens can be as intelligent in their way as other creatures in theirs. But serious psychological problems are here involved. Why does a hen lay an egg in a car? So her offspring may go far? If so, it's easy to see why she

WASHINGTON—Several careful secret surveys made recently of Japanese military and naval strength indicate that Japan can do just about anything she wants in the Far East.

The reports show that the Japanese Navy is in A-1 shape, and has suffered not a bit as a result of the Chinese war. The Japanese Army also is in good shape, though not in the same conditions as the Navy. The Chinese war, though still dragging on at heavy cost, has been an excellent training school for the Japanese military.

Chief handicap under which Japan suffers is her desperate economic situation. Easiest remedy for this is to take the Dutch East Indies and the wealth possessions of the Dutch, French and British in Southern Asia.

This is what seems sure to happen. There is no question but that the Japanese can take French Indo-China, the Dutch possessions of Java and Sumatra, and all the other South Pacific islands that are worth bothering about, in a few weeks.

Only spot which might hold out is the British naval base at Singapore, and naval experts disagree as to whether the Japanese could take it or not. In time, they probably could.

Everything now seems set for the Japanese to steam south simultaneously with the Hitler blitzkrieg against Britain. Probably the Japanese will wait until they see how the blitzkrieg is going before they stage theirs in the South Pacific.

TNT—DON'T TOUCH

Nebraska Republicans are very enthusiastic about Wendell Willkie, but they want no speech by him in McCook, home town of Senator George Norris, the State's veteran public-power crusader.

Such a plan was reported shortly after Willkie arrived at his Colorado vacation spot, which is near McCook. News dispatches declared that the GOP standard bearer intended to beard the father of TVA right in his own home town. But the idea did not thrill Nebraska Republican leaders.

They have a wholesome respect for Norris' vote-swinging powers, recall vividly how four years ago in a three-cornered race which he entered at the last moment he polled 53 percent of the vote.

So last week a delegation made a pilgrimage to Willkie. In the group were Kenneth Wherry, State Chairman; George Carpenter, National Committeeman; Hugh Butler, candidate for senator, and Dwight Griswold, candidate for governor. They received a cordial welcome and discussed a number of subjects, prominent among which was a strong argument as to why Willkie should NOT make a speech in McCook.

It was pointed out that Norris is not up for re-election this year, that he is busy

DIET AND HEALTH

Save Every Tooth

● A CORRESPONDENT writes, "in connection with your article on arthritis I have a question to ask and that is in connection with dead teeth. Should one with arthritis have all his dead teeth extracted?"

It is a very good question. Questions are good in proportion to the difficulty one has in answering them. So if this is very good, you must expect the answer to be somewhat qualified.

The principles which form the background of the question are: Dr. Clendenen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

first, the idea that arthritis is caused by focal infection; that the inflammation of the joints in arthritis gets there from some such focal point as the teeth or tonsils; second, that dead teeth are dead because they have been the seat of infection.

A dead tooth is one in which the nerve is degenerated and the pulp has consequently atrophied. Nearly always this has been caused by a previous infection arising from a filling. Dead teeth often have begun with apical abscesses—these become sterile and harmless, but they are a potential source of reinfection.

Individual Matter So the question comes down to how much infection a dead tooth carries, and how much harm it is doing to the arthritis. This can only be determined in each individual case; no more general rule can be laid down.

Dentists and physicians are becoming more conservative about this whole matter. After all, teeth are very valuable adjuncts to nutrition. If a dead tooth is not actually doing any harm, it may be doing a great deal of good. The fact of radical exodontia is distinctly losing its momentum. For years we have been in an orgy of tooth pulling. An eminent dental authority said recently that every dentist should do his utmost to place all infected teeth in a healthy condition, and only when that fails, should extraction be considered.

The head of a large memorial dental clinic states that the fact that a tooth has lost its pulp (nerve), or that a degenerative change has taken place around the root end, are not of themselves sufficient reasons for extraction.

More Conservative

The theory of focal infection also has undergone a somewhat conservative change. Dr. Charles Mayo said: "the future of medical science rests with the doctor who can stop or kill the germs as they develop in the mouth." The future of medical science is a somewhat large order. Doctor Rosenow, one of the leaders of the focal infection idea, writes: "I do not advocate wrecking the mouth," adding later, "but I do believe a tooth is only a tooth, while a life is worth more than all the teeth in the world."

Doubts about the relation of focal infection to many human diseases are recently expressed by Drs. Arnett and Ennis, who say: "no statistically significant association can be demonstrated between apical infection of teeth and underweight, arthritis, kidney disease, chorea or heart disease."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenen has seven pamphlets which can be obtained free of charge. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenen, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining Weight," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Love without Music

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

IT WAS hours later when Linda and Ronald faced each other in a small restaurant where fat candles were melting in round holders and the food was too heavy for a summer night. The place was off the beaten track. That was why they had chosen it.

They had a great deal to say to each other. Linda realized, looking at the familiar face across the table, near, dear, and yet so suddenly a stranger.

She played with a fruit cup that she didn't want, and waited for the swing musician who, after all, was Ronnie, who had a wit with a horn, to speak.

He pushed the fruit cup away and gathered her restless hands in his.

"Linda, precious, if we are going on together there are some things that we must share, must talk over. It won't help Parrish for you to become involved again in the case. If your evidence is needed, use it, but wait. Maybe you won't have to speak. I'm going along on the tour Linda, after all."

"They just gave me a raise and a better billing and permission to marry. It's what I want. You know how I've always wanted to play my horn!"

"The blue eyes begged her to understand and the pressure on her hands deepened."

"Yes, I know, Ronnie," she answered.

"And you'll wait, Linda love?"

"Ronnie, an old man and woman are frightened to death because of all this. If Mr. Parrish is guilty, then he'll be discovered. But he isn't. And I can help him now. I can save several weeks of torment. Oh, Ronnie, don't you see?"

A little wind had sprung up in the street outside, making the candles flicker. The waiter took away the untouched fruit cups and brought something in a casserole, but neither one looked at it.

"Linda, I'm asking you to let me decide this!"

"No, Ronnie. I've a duty to do and I'm doing it."

He looked at her as though he had not seen her before. "Sarah said you were—hard."

"Sarah? You talked me over with her? And maybe she advised this?" She put down her napkin.

"I guess our ways divide right here, Ronnie. We—don't follow the same rules any more. We're sort of strangers." She hesitated, waiting for him to say something, to draw her back to her seat or follow her, but when he did nothing she tossed her amber curls higher.

"Good—goodbye, Ronnie." It was just a whisper.

And then she was gone. She began to run. Once she thought eager steps were sounding behind her, but she did not look back. Once she thought someone called her name, but she told herself that it was because she wanted to hear it called.

Well, something was over. At the immensity of it, her knees felt weak. All of her life, since she was eight, she had been journeying to meet Ronnie. Every signpost led to him.

Now what should she do since he was gone? What did other women do? Make masks for their faces and wear them day long and night long?

She was lost and lonely and tomorrow she would wake up and her heart would do the curious things that stories said hearts did when they were suffering, but tonight, for a little space of time, she felt—relieved.

She was ashamed of herself because she did. She tried to remember Ronald's wide shoulders hunched over the table, but all she could hear was his voice begging her not to give her evidence just yet.

She glanced at the name of the street where she was, hailed a taxicab, and gave the address of the Central Police station. There was no reason now for withholding her information.

Eventually she reached the office of an assistant prosecutor, who listened attentively.

"I think you may save the man, Miss Avery," he said. "We've tried to account for that missing time. You are sure you have the hour correctly?"

"Certainly. The clerks remember that I was in the coffee shop and that Clarabel telephoned for a milkshake, so I couldn't have done it, and Mr. Parrish was there at the very same time."

There was eagerness in that thought. Then she remembered that it was too late for such an action because she had given her information to the police. But maybe Ronnie would be sorry and repent and ask her forgiveness. Perhaps she should have hurried home instead of going for an aimless ferry ride.

At the thought that maybe Ronald was waiting for her, Linda became tense and restless. She wanted the boat to hurry back to the cyclorama of buildings that swept the skyline.

And yet there are possibilities of loss, reverses, extravagance or heavy expenditures. Be practical about this, or the benefits may ooze through the fingers. Also safeguard the health and that of the family, especially elderly females. Do not run counter to elders or superiors. Use discretion or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a rather successful year, with the interests centered on new contracts, insurance or probable bequests. Handle such with conservatism and wise judgment, lest the good fortune slip away through extravagance or self-indulgence. Use finesse when dealing with superiors, or elders.

Nearly 300 Grangers At Walnut Township Meeting

Group From Scioto Valley Offers Fine Program

Two hundred and ninety-eight members gathered at Walnut Township School Tuesday for the meeting of Nebraska Grange when Scioto Valley Grange presented the program. This marked the last of the summer series of traveling programs.

Homer Reber, master of Nebraska Grange, announced the joint picnic of the granges of the county and Pickaway County Farm Bureau for August 20 at Gold Cliff Park. Guests are requested to take table service and charge of the program, announced the Grange Camp which will be August 9, 10 and 11 at Lancaster camp ground with an interesting program presented by outstanding speakers. Nebraska Grange will be host August 17 when Pomona Grange meets at Walnut School.

Turney Glick, county deputy, expressed his thanks for the co-operation and interest of the granges in the traveling programs, the meetings having been unusually successful.

Mrs. Harold Fisher, who was in charge of the program, announced that it was originally planned by Mrs. Ira Scothorn, lecturer of Scioto Valley, and would be presented as she had arranged it.

Musio by several of the younger grangers opened the program, the orchestra members including Ralph Swoyer, Leo and Robert Berger, Dorothy Hinkle, Charlotte Courtwright, Billy Speakman and Paul Bowers.

The second part of the program depicted the life of Stephen Foster in song scenes, music and story. The stage was set to represent a southern plantation, with cotton field and miniature log cabin.

Mabel Fisher was the narrator. Herbert Swoyer took the part of Foster, Robert Berger assisting him in the scenes.

Paul Bowers played a delightful medley of Stephen Foster compositions on his clarinet.

A beautiful feature of the program was the dance in southern costume by Charlotte Courtwright, Dorothy Hinkle, Viola Berger, Tina Mae, Puncell, Leo Berger, Edwin and Ralph Swoyer and Harold Peters. Norma Jean and Donna Lou McCrae presented an excellent tap dance.

The cotton pickers included Paul Peters, soloist, with Harry Speakman, Walter Berger, Alpha Peters and Clara Swoyer as members of the chorus.

Dorothy Hinkle played "Jeannie with the Light Brown Hair" as a violin solo; duet, "Beautiful Dreamer", Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fisher; solo, "Nellie Was a Lady", Mrs. Henry Snyder. A chorus of 20 voices with Miss Helen McCord at the piano was heard during the well arranged program.

The entertainment was concluded with refreshments served to between 350 and 400 members and guests.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, August 7

A MODERATELY successful day, with certain rather surprising developments probably in connection with contracts, litigation, insurance or bequests. And yet there are possibilities of loss, reverses, extravagance or heavy expenditures. Be practical about this, or the benefits may ooze through the fingers. Also safeguard the health and that of the family, especially elderly females. Do not run counter to elders or superiors. Use discretion or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a rather successful year, with the interests centered on new contracts, insurance or probable bequests. Handle such with conservatism and wise judgment, lest the good fortune slip away through extravagance or self-indulgence. Use finesse when dealing with superiors, or elders.

DR. ANDERSON TO COACH STARS; AIDES SELECTED

CHICAGO, August 7—It will be the Notre Dame football system against the Notre Dame football system when the college all-stars take the field against the Green Bay Packers in the seventh annual all-star gridiron spectacle at Soldier Field on the night of August 29.

This became evident today with announcement of the election of Dr. Edward Anderson of the University of Iowa as head coach of the all-stars. Anderson, in his collegiate days, was nominated for all-American honors by Walter Eckersall as the result of his play at end with Notre Dame. Green Bay also uses a modified form of the Notre Dame system.

Anderson's assistants as coaches for the all-stars will be T. E. (Tad) Wieman of Princeton; Lowell Dawson, of Tulane; L. T. (Buck) Shaw of Santa Clara and Don Faurot of Missouri. Shaw and Anderson were teammates at Notre Dame.

All five coaches have accepted election to the staff and will be at Northwestern University in Evanston next Sunday morning to greet the squad of 67 all-stars who have accepted invitations to the training camp.

DERRINGER TO PITCH

CINCINNATI, August 7—Big Paul Derringer was to take the mound for the Cincinnati Reds today if rain doesn't again postpone the opener of a series with the Chicago Cubs. Rain washed out the scheduled game yesterday.

LARGEST COW ON WHEELS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Ever see a cow on wheels? Well, you may see one soon when the largest cow in the world goes on exhibition around the country. The animal, "Lone Star," was exhibited at the Chicago World's Fair in 1933. Recently she was killed in a fall down a chute at Terre Haute, Ind. The head, hide and bones have been entrusted to a San Antonio taxidermist for mounting. Wheels will be attached to the stuffed animal's feet so it can be easily moved in and out of a trailer when on exhibition tours. Lone Star, in the life, weighed 3,000 pounds and was more than six feet high.

Not Our Jimmy, Is It?

YES, it is, despite the catching paraphernalia. Fox, the regular Red Sox first baseman, donned the mask for the first time in two years during the Cleveland series. Jimmy, you know, once was a catcher. The move was to insert as much punch into the Sox lineup as possible. Lou Finney, outfielder, went to first and his place in the field was taken by Dom DiMaggio.

Farley To Face Task Of Building New Club

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, August 7—The American League pennant for 1940 herewith is conceded to some flapper other than the one at Yankee Stadium, New York.

We go that far without any qualification whatever today, but more timidly suggest that the flag will be flying next year in one of two western parks—Detroit or Cleveland. Timidly, because the Boston Red Sox still have a chance. With their hitting they would be a shoo-in, if they had any pitching. The Yankees can be counted out now once and for all by way of finally recognizing one of the biggest upsets in the long history of baseball upsets.

We recall that not so long ago we predicted that the Yankees would win their fifth straight pennant by 10 games. At the time of that writing the Yankees had broken out of their hitting slump for one brief spell and seemed to be rolling again. But when they crept up near the top last month, then fell back their day was done. They can't hope to rebound again now, with their pitching shot and the team so fettered by injuries that there must be some question from one afternoon to the next as to whether Manager Joe McCarthy will be able to muster a full team for any given game.

Fall Thoroughly
Few teams ever before have fallen apart so thoroughly. Hitting and pitching slumps were bad enough without the further handicap of not being able to muster nine able-bodied men for a game. You can't win with that. Thus did one of the great clubs of all time collapse, leaving a gigantic rebuilding job for Mr. Jim Farley when he finally takes over in the near future as the new owner. Pitching, catching, infield and outfield replacements will be needed and must be had if the Yankees are to be supported in the style to which they have become accustomed.

In the 22 years since 1918 when they finished in fourth place and started the climb toward their first pennant four years later the Yankees have won 11 pennants, finished second six times, third three times, fourth once and seventh once. Hence they have been out of the first division only once in all that time.

But they will be extremely lucky to get up as high as fourth this season, and conceivably could drop all the way back to another seventh place windup such as they did in 1925. By this time the Yankees simply are going through the motions, as they wallow around in fifth place, beaten four in a row through yesterday.

THE HEROES AND THE GOATS

HEROES—Sid Hudson, Senators, who pitched a one-hitter against the Athletics; Thornton Lee, White Sox, who hurled his second successive two-hitter.

GOATS—Pepper Martin, Cardinals, whose error allowed the Pirates to score the winning run against St. Louis; Kirby Higbe, Phillies, who was knocked out of the box by a five-run Boston rally in the seventh.

Kultur has been displacing civilization in Europe.

THORNTON LEE GIVES TWO

Detroit Moves Back Into Top As Indians Split Twin Bill

By Ed Kieley

NEW YORK, August 7—When a pitcher hurls a no-hitter, according to the figure filberts, it is 50 percent good pitching and 50 percent luck and today Sid Hudson, with the Washington Senators, is thoroughly convinced such a statement has less force than the truth warrants.

Twice this season Hudson, who was a sensation with Sanford in the Florida State League last year, has heaved one-hit games. Yesterday Sam Chapman, Philadelphia Athletics outfielder, kept the 22-year-old hurler out of baseball's hall of fame with a scratch single in the seventh inning. It was the only bingle Hudson allowed in hanging up his tenth victory as the Senators swamped the Athletics, 11 to 0.

With Sanford in 1939, Hudson, who stands six feet, four inches, had a record of 24 wins against four losses. He pitched 250 innings, led the league in strike-outs with 192 and finished every game he started.

Lee Also Tough

Hudson, however, was not alone in having a good day on the mound yesterday. Thornton Lee turned in his second successive two-hitter as the Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with the Cleveland Indians. Lee held the Indians powerless to win the opener, 5 to 1, and Johnny Allen and Bob Feller combined their efforts to give the Tribe the nightcap, 3 to 2.

Almost any hope of the New York Yankees had of winning their fifth consecutive pennant was blasted when they lost their fourth straight game, 8 to 3, to the Boston Red Sox. This loss set the Yanks back to a season's percentage of .500 with 49 victories and as many defeats.

The Detroit Tigers went into the American League lead by defeating the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 2, in a night game in St. Louis. Buck Newsum started for the Tigers and bagged his 14th victory of the season. He was relieved in the ninth by Archie McKain. The Browns used three hurlers.

The Boston Bees made it six wins in their last eight starts by taking the Philadelphia Phillies twice, 3 to 1, and 12 to 2. Manuel Salvo, a New York Giant refugee, held up the National League pitching honors by limiting the Phils to four hits in the opener and Shortstop Eddie Miller aided the Boston cause by hitting a homer in each game.

Rain, Darkness Interfere

Rain and darkness joined forces and held a scheduled twin-bill between the Pittsburgh Pirates and the St. Louis Cardinals to one game, which the Buccaneers won, 3 to 1. The first game was delayed for more than an hour and a half by rain and the second game was only in the third inning when it was called because of darkness. The score at the time was 0-0. The victory enabled the Pirates to gain a tie with the Red Birds for fifth place.

Brooklyn and New York were not scheduled.

RED BIRDS ONLY TWO GAMES OUT OF SECOND

COLUMBUS, August 7—The Columbus Red Birds were only two games out of second place in the American Association today as they chalked up a 4 to 3 win over Toledo while a double defeat was marked up against second-place Minneapolis.

The Red Birds came from behind to win the game at Toledo. The Mud Hens had jumped off to a three run lead in the first two innings but four counters in the sixth put the Birds in front where they stayed.

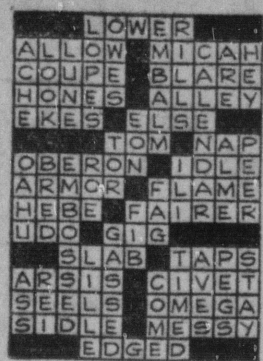

Minneapolis' two defeats came at the hands of the league-leading Kansas City Blues by scores of 5 to 2 and 2 to 1. Kansas City now has a 13-game lead over the Mud Hens.

In other games, Louisville defeated Indianapolis 8 to 4 and St. Paul edged Milwaukee, 4 to 1.

PARADE OF 500 4-H CLUB MEMBERS TO BE ADDED TO PUMPKIN SHOW

PROGRESS MADE ON LOCATION OF JUNIOR DISPLAY

Parrett Says Space Worth $1,400 Contracted For October Event

DR. O. J. TOWERS RESIGNS

Industrial Procession To Be Feature Of First Afternoon

Greater participation for junior groups in this year's Pumpkin Show seemed assured Tuesday night when Pumpkin Show directors at their meeting in the council chamber voted to include in the show the 50 piece 4-H Club band and a 4-H Club parade, composed of the county's 500 club members.

Directors pointed out that they believed the band not only could be used in the 4-H Club parade, but also in the other parades to be included in the show.

A new feature being planned by the Junior Fair group is a fat stock sale, in which more than 35 head of select cattle will be sold. F. K. Blair, county agricultural agent, told the directors, with an additional 25 head of cattle to be included in the livestock show. On recommendation of Mr. Blair, directors voted to place the livestock exhibits on Pickaway Street between Franklin and Main Streets. The location will provide an adequate water supply and a natural drainage for the live stock exhibits, the county agent said.

Fair Location Uncertain

Space for other Junior Fair exhibits, including school displays, has not been definitely established, although Junior Fair officials informed the directors that Elmer Wolf's feed barn on East Franklin Street may be obtained. Mr. Wolf has been contacted and favors the plan, they said. Junior Fair exhibits have previously been displayed in the armory, but fair officials were deprived of the use of the building this year when a federal decree was announced, forbidding the use of such buildings for other than military purposes.

Junior Fair board members represented at the meeting were Miss Christine Schreiner, secretary-treasurer of the organization, and George Mowery, vice-president.

Mack Parrett, secretary of the Pumpkin Show society, announced that $1,400 worth of space has been contracted for this year's show, with $336 worth of space being sold for pop-corn and soft drink stands. Premium lists have not yet been completed, but will be within the next few days.

Dr. Towers Resigns

The resignation of Dr. O. J. Towers, head of the fruits and vegetables department, was submitted and approved by the directors. Due to other connections, Dr. Towers said that he was unable to continue as a director of the show. No one has been appointed to take his place.

Plans to include a wild life exhibit of the State Conservation department was discussed, but no action was taken. The Circleville Camera Club will have charge of this year's photography display, while the Boy Scouts will have charge of the information booth.

Dan McClain, in charge of parades, told members of the society that he was planning to open the show with the industrial parade Wednesday afternoon.

COL. DONOVAN'S VISIT TO ISLES OF IMPORTANCE

LONDON, August 7—Col. William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, who returned to the United States Sunday aboard the British trans-Atlantic flying boat Clare, conferred with British government ministers in London as a special envoy for President Roosevelt, the London Daily Herald said today.

Donovan consulted King George VI, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, War Secretary Anthony Eden, First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander, Minister of Supply Herbert Morrison and Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, the paper said.

He also conferred with Lieut. Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, Britain's new home force commander-in-chief, and visited military centers, coast defenses and munitions and ordnance plants, according to the report.

October 16. Directors voted to make this parade the only afternoon parade in which industrial machinery might be exhibited.

No medicine shows or weight guessing "tands" will be included this year, Secretary Parrett said, a state law prohibiting such concessions.

Decorations Assured

Hildeburn Martin, official decorator for the show, told the directors that he was finding the merchants' attitude toward the show more favorable this year than ever before. Out of 39 merchants contacted, he has sold the standard Pumpkin Show decoration to 35, he remarked.

Directors present at the meeting included T. D. Krinn, Robert Colville, William Cady, R. L. Brehmer, Herman Hill, George McDowell, B. R. Bales, Dan McClain, Forrest Short, Joseph Burns, Karl Herrmann and Mack Parrett.

WILLKIE WORKS ON TALK; QUIET ON CONSCRIPTION

COLORADO SPRINGS, August 7—Having absorbed the views of farm leaders of 11 states, Wendell L. Willkie today began the farm section of the acceptance speech he will deliver at Elwood, Indiana, on August 17.

In addition, the candidate reported that he was working on an addition to his acceptance speech—a section on conscription.

Willkie's views on conscription have been asked repeatedly by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D) of

Naval Militia To Fill Guard Duty In August

COLUMBUS, August 7—The nearly 1,000 members of the Ohio Naval Militia will be available for duty in fire, flood and other disasters during the 21-day absence of the National Guard in August, Maj. Gen. Gilson D. Light, the adjutant general, said today.

All 11,500 members of the guard of the state will participate in the large-scale Second Army maneuver to be in the vicinity of Sparta, Wis., August 11-31. The adjutant general's office will remain open here to handle routine matters with Lieut. Col. Earl J. Fisher, Columbus, in charge of a skeleton staff of clerks and stenographers.

CIO CHIEF HINTS AGAIN OF THIRD PARTY EFFORTS

DENVER, Colo., August 7—CIO Chieftain John L. Lewis today was on record with another prediction that the ranks of labor will one day form their own political party.

Without mentioning names, Lewis bitterly assailed the administration last night for advocating conscription, and asserted that "some day labor will lose faith in the two major parties to the point where it will go out and organize its own party."

Addressing the annual convention of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Lewis declared:

"Politicians in power and those who seek office pay too little attention to the wishes and demands of the men and women who comprise labor. Labor can endorse some man today and tomorrow he'll come out and kick labor in the face by advocating conscription, just like that."

Montana, but the candidate has said that he would not enter into debate on any issues with any one except the President himself.

Willkie had a long list of visitors waiting to see him today, having been absent from his Colorado Springs headquarters for most of three days.

RICHARD PENN RETURNS AFTER SCIENTIFIC TRIP

Richard Penn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Penn of Pickaway Township, has returned home after participating in a scientific expedition to the Colorado Rockies with Dr. W. M. Powell of Kenyon College, Gambier, O.

Young Penn, a freshman at the college, was chosen by the professor to accompany him after the county youth showed marked ability in the field of science. Penn arrived home Tuesday. He said the trip was highly interesting and successful.

TRUMAN LEADS STARK IN RACE

Missouri Governor Trails In Contest For Place In U. S. Senate

ST. LOUIS, August 7—Senator Harry S. Truman of Kansas City was leading Gov. Lloyd C. Stark by more than 5,000 votes in the race for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator, according to returns today from 3,038 of Missouri's 4,446 precincts. The primary was held yesterday.

Maurice M. Milligan, former U. S. district attorney at Kansas City and third candidate for the senatorial nomination, was far behind Truman and Stark.

The vote was: Truman 173,072; Stark 167,481; Milligan 79,815.

Sure, democracies are decadent and helpless and everything; but we've just salted down $5,000,000, 000 more gold than the dictators' mouths were watering for.

Germany sneers at American gold, but so far shows plenty of enthusiasm for holding on to her own. Fines, imprisonment and sometimes death are the penalties for Germans who try to keep some of the yellow metal for themselves or to smuggle it out of the Reich.

PARADE OF 500 4-H CLUB MEMBERS TO BE ADDED TO PUMPKIN SHOW

PROGRESS MADE ON LOCATION OF JUNIOR DISPLAY

Parrett Says Space Worth $1,400 Contracted For October Event

DR. O. J. TOWERS RESIGNS

Industrial Procession To Be Feature Of First Afternoon

Greater participation for junior groups in this year's Pumpkin Show seemed assured Tuesday night when Pumpkin Show directors at their meeting in the council chamber voted to include in the show the 50 piece 4-H Club band and a 4-H Club parade, composed of the county's 500 club members.

Directors pointed out that they believed the band not only could be used in the 4-H Club parade, but also in the other parades to be included in the show.

A new feature being planned by the Junior Fair group is a fat stock sale, in which more than 35 head of select cattle will be sold. F. K. Blair, county agricultural agent, told the directors, with an additional 25 head of cattle to be included in the livestock show. On recommendation of Mr. Blair, directors voted to place the livestock exhibits on Pickaway Street between Franklin and Main Streets. The location will provide an adequate water supply and a natural drainage for the live stock exhibits, the county agent said.

Fair Location Uncertain

Space for other Junior Fair exhibits, including school displays, has not been definitely established, although Junior Fair officials informed the directors that Elmer Wolf's feed barn on East Franklin Street may be obtained. Mr. Wolf has been contacted and favors the plan, they said. Junior Fair exhibits have previously been displayed in the armory, but fair officials are deprived of the use of the building this year when a federal decree was announced, forbidding the use of such buildings for other than military purposes.

Junior Fair board members represented at the meeting were Miss Christine Schreiner, secretary-treasurer of the organization, and George Mowery, vice-president.

Mack Parrett, secretary of the Pumpkin Show society, announced that $1,400 worth of space has been contracted for this year's show, with $336 worth of space being sold for pop-corn and soft drink stands. Premium lists have not yet been completed, but will be within the next few days.

Dr. Towers Resigns

The resignation of Dr. O. J. Towers, head of the fruits and vegetables department, was submitted and approved by the directors. Due to other connections, Dr. Towers said that he was unable to continue as a director of the show. No one has been appointed to take his place.

Plans to include a wild life exhibit of the State Conservation department was discussed, but no action was taken. The Circleville Camera Club will have charge of this year's photography display, while the Boy Scouts will have charge of the information booth. Dan McClain, in charge of parades, told members of the society that he was planning to open the show with the industrial parade Wednesday afternoon.
